George Bush's Culture of Death

by Michael in New York on 8/02/2005 05:00:00 PM

George Bush pretends he supports a "culture of life." But he launched an unnecessary war (denounced by the Pope as "unjust") and did it on a lie. 1800 US soldiers are dead. Many thousands more are wounded. Bush also turns his back on the slaughter of people in Darfur; he calls it genocide but refuses to act. Millions are starving to death in Niger, but Bush did nothing six months or a year ago when helping to save lives would have been much cheaper and easier. When the rest of the civilized world got together to try and put Africa on the right track by encouraging capitalism, lowering the debt burden for countries that are fighting corruption, and overseeing the spending of their own money on mosquito netting and basic medical supplies, Bush dragged his feet and didn't increase spending by a single penny. Bush could provide access to clean drinking water to the one billion people of the world who are literally dying of thirst for just $1.7 billion a year. And he won't.

George Bush = culture of death.
