Kerry Is Doing Great

by Michael in New York on 9/23/2004 01:09:00 AM

Forgive me if others have already weighed in. But I just watched my tape of John Kerry on David Letterman and he was terrific! I wish he could appear on the show every day until the election. He was appropriately relaxed but very Presidential and very serious at times. Letterman asked some very substantive questions and Kerry was clear and forceful. He even read a Top Ten list about Bush's tax proposals (my favorite was the one that said Cheney could write off Bush as a dependent) and then proved he'd actually watched Letterman by tossing the postcard over his shoulder through the set behind, as Letterman always does. That combined with his strong speech on Iraq and focused, serious demeanor make me feel the most confident I've felt since the Republican convention.
