By Michael Giltz

Jack Nicholson and Diane Keaton in a scene from "Something's Gotta Give."

"SOMETHING'S GOTTA GIVE"

This romantic comedy ($28.95, Columbia TriStar) earned more substance and charm than it really deserves thanks to old pros Jack Nicholson and Diane Keaton. The extras include Nicholson unwisely crooning "La Vie En Rose," in a deleted scene, and multiple commentaries. Amid all the hoopla over the stars, one performance was overlooked — Keanu Reeves as the boy-toy gave his most charming performance since the stoner glory days of "Bill & Ted."

"THE JACK PAAR COLLECTION"
"THE RICHARD PRYOR SHOW"

For those who weren't there, "The Jack Paar Collection" ($29.99, Shout) features a very good retrospective, numerous interview and monologue highlights, as well as three complete shows from talk-show pioneer Paar, who hosted the "Tonight Show" starting in 1957. Only four episodes of Richard Pryor's 1977 show aired — NBC was freaked out by skits like "El Negrro" — but he paved the way for "In Living Color," "Chappelle's Show" and "South Park." Pryor's set ($39.99, Image) includes all four episodes and a TV special, as well as outtakes and a Pryor Q&A.

"HOUSE OF SAND AND FOG"

This over-praised melodrama ($26.99, DreamWorks) does have one saving grace — the acting. Ben Kingsley is marvelous as an Iranian aristocrat fallen on hard times in America; Shohreh Aghdashloo has the role of a lifetime as his wife; Ron Eldard of "ER"; and Jennifer Connelly proves her Oscar was no fluke.

"THE LAST ROUND: CHUVALO VS. ALI"
"SPLIT DECISION"

A feast for boxing fans, with "The Last Round" telling the Rocky-like saga of Canadian journeyman George Chuvalo, who stumbled into a shot at the heavyweight crown and took Muhammad Ali the distance ($24.95, DocuRama). "Split Decision" ($29.95, First Run) tells the tortuous immigrant tale of Jesus Chavez, who struggles to succeed in boxing but also struggles with being deported back to Mexico for a crime he committed in his youth.

Also out:

An early Western and one of the first shows filmed in color, "The Cisco Kid" ($49.98, MPI); the cop show, "Homicide: Life on the Street"; Season 4 ($99.95, A&E); the junkyard comedy, "Sanford & Son"; Fourth Season ($29.95, Columbia TriStar); the truth-telling docu-comedy "Pam & Teller: Bulls- -" First Season ($39.99, Showtime); the forensic crime show, "CSI"; Third Season ($89.99, Paramount); Agatha Christie's flighty detectives, "Tommy & Tuppence"; Set 2 ($39.99, Acorn). Plus Disney's "Brother Bear" ($29.99, Disney); George Burns' hits from the '70s, "The Sunshine Boys" and "Going in Style" ($19.98 each, Warner Bros.); the "Panic Room" Special Edition" ($39.95, Columbia TriStar), with lots of extras; and the tense, 1957 anti-capital punishment thriller "Time Without Pity" ($19.95, HVE), starring Michael Redgrave and Leo McKern.

Out next week:

The "The Pink Panther" Film Collection," a special edition of Merchant-Ivory's "A Room With a View," and the much anticipated TV collection — "Freaks & Geeks."
